

Development and Adaptation Days at COP-12

11 and 12 November 2006, Nairobi, Kenya

<http://www.iied.org/CC/projects/COP.html>

Participation is free but by invitation only, please email: isabelle.lemaire@iied.org

Development and Adaptation Days has become an anticipated part of each Conference of the Parties—an opportunity for the international climate change and development communities to share new approaches, explore common concerns and further adaptation efforts in developing countries.

The workshop will:

- Bring together scientists, policy makers, practitioners, and negotiators from the climate change and development communities over a two-day period
- Present and discuss the latest developments on adaptation and development in relation to climate change
- Facilitate greater collaborative links between different stakeholders (particularly between the climate change and development communities)
- Disseminate event results through printed and web-based reports/outputs

Selection of papers

A selection of papers will be presented at each session, with the exception of the High Level Sessions. The papers selected will be consistent with the goals and objectives of the workshop and each session, and contribute to new knowledge and/or perspectives. The papers were selected with a preference for papers from developing countries reporting on recent or ongoing activities taking place.
